AN OFFENDED OSTRICH.

An Innocent Kitten Mistook His Legs for Saplings and Climbed Up. The ostrich at the zoological garden stood in the long yard adjoining its cage In the deer house recently, says the Phili delphia Press. It gazed contemplatively through the bars of the fence at the world beyond and shivered every once in awhile as the cool breezes swept down' upon it.

It was thinking of the differences in climates and wendering whether if it buried one of its eggs as it used to do in the long grass during such weather the cool would hatch out an ice cream churn. While it was revolving the question in its mind a playful kitten came through the fence into the yard. It was a pretty kitten-pure white, except for a few blotches that looked as if somebody had thrown an ink bottle at it, after carefully removing the cork. The kitten went running along the yard until it came to the ostrich. Thinking its long, thick legs were young saplings, the playful kitten gave a ran and quickly climbed up them, and was soon on top of the estrich's back.

The hoge bird did not know what to make of it at first and went cantering around the yard as though the plague were after it. Round and round it went until, red in the face, it came to a sudden stop. The kitten never moved. It had taken a firm hold of the ostrich and did not propose to be shaken.

"I stood the earthquake this morning," aid the kitten; "I guess I can stand this." aid the kitten; "I guess I can stand this."

Finding that the strange beast refused to be thus summarily disposed of, the ostrich became less scared and more angry. It curied its neck and twisted its head so as to get a fair look at the kitten. The kitten never winced. It began to think it had barked up the wrong tree, but it was determined to see the matter out. The ostrich aimed a blow at the undesirable rider with the back, but it dedeed. It tried it awain. its beak, but it dodged. It tried it again, but the result was the same. Again and again the agile head and long neck rained sledge-hammer blows at the tricky little kitten. It escaped them all, though some were too near for comfort. Finally the kitten got scared. It ran out on the ostrich's neck to get out of the way. Then it smiled. The ostrich couldn't hit it there. Its smile did not last long, howhit it there. Its smile did not last long, now-ever. With a sudden movement the ostrich stretched its neck backward, encircled the kitten around the waist and squeezed-it until it was dead. Then it unwound itself and placidly looked at the dead animal. After a moment or two of contemplation it picked up its victim and flung it as far as it could. Then it calmly resumed its meditations that had been so ruthlessly inter-

NEVER BURNED WITCHES.

Mr. Barton Denies That the Puritans Ever Indulged in That Practice. The Boston Journal publishes correspond nce between Albert Clarke and the Rev. William E. Barton, in which the former says that Mr. Barton had been quoted as saying in a speech in that city on Monday: "It was frequently urged against them (the Puritans) that they had burned witches. So they did, but they abandoned that practice fifty years before it was given up in England," etc. Mr. Clarke continues: "If you referred to any executions in Massachusetts.by burning at the stake you will confer a great favor upon the public by citing the history that records them. I know it is a common impression that such execu-tions took place, and, though I do not claim to be familiar with the history, I remember bearing Senator Hoar reply to a taunt of such barbarity in Massachusetts, made by a Southern Senator - I think the late Benjamir Hill, of Georgia-about fourteen years ago, that no witch or person accused of witch craft was ever burned at the stake in accurate scholar and would be unlikely to be mistaken about a matter of so much importance in the history of his native State, it occurs to me that possibly you spoke from an early impression gained in a distant State, and from the common

To this Mr. Barton makes a positive disclaimer, saying:
"I am glad that I did not say yesterday, or at any other time, that the Puritans burned witches. I have frequently corrected that error. While I was literary editor of the Central Congregationalist I challenged the statement made by the Rev. J. T. Christian, in his volumeon the Eaphista, and I think I corrected the same impression in a review I wrote of Marvin's life of Cotton Mather for the Bibliotheca Sacra. I am on record in print on that subject, and the slip was the reporter's. I said in substance, that we are reminded of the Puritans hanging witches 200 years ago by the cousins of the men who burned a woman as a witch in Ireland two weeks ago." To this Mr. Barton makes a positive dis-

victory over the Orioles. A military and rade, in which the mayor and other official dignitaries will participate, to be followed by a banquet and ball, has been mapped out by the fans of the Forest City. demonstration will occur on the re turn of the Spiders to their native heath
